Know the Signs of Methamphetamine Contamination

PROFESSIONAL TESTING IS KEY TO METH DETECTION

Methamphetamine drug labs are being discovered all over the country. Many of these labs, located in commercial and residential structures alike, can go undetected for many months. Homeowners, employees and contractors working in these structures are equally at risk.

Meth residue causes a myriad of symptoms including respiratory illness, skin burns, eye irritation, headaches, nausea, dizziness, and even cancer.

Methamphetamine is an Invisible Toxin

The toxins left behind after meth production pose the greatest risk.

These chemicals leave no visible evidence and permeate all surfaces.

Only One Meth Lab in Ten is Busted

Walls, air ducts, flooring, and even the air itself can be toxic. Even though many states have laws requiring disclosure of Meth labs once discovered, only one Meth Lab in 10 is uncovered by the authorities.

How can Envirocheck help?

Envirocheck is the leader in methamphetamine detection - protecting your employees, residents and tenants from this dangerous toxin and its lasting effects.

Our expert technicians will take samples and deliver them to our state-of-the-art laboratory or analysis. You will receive verbal results in addition to a full, written report for your records.
